Part 4: Short Talk Questions (2%)

The iconic curves on Coca-Cola bottles are one of the most recognizable designs in the world. This unique shape, known as the contour bottle, was created in 1915. At the time, Coca-Cola wanted a bottle that would stand out from its competitors and be easy to recognize, even if broken or touched in the dark. A glass company in Indiana came up with the idea, inspired by the shape of a cocoa bean. The curvy design became a success and helped Coca-Cola build a strong brand identity. Over the years, the contour bottle has been used in ads, artwork, and even fashion. It is more than just packaging—it represents Coca-Cola's history and style. Even though the company now uses many types of bottles, the classic curved one still represents the brand worldwide. (延伸自 5 Unit 10)
